The following observations were gathered from market personnel and vendors this week:

1. Compared to last week, a slight increase in fresh marine commodities was evident among the monitored retail markets after the recent occurrence of Severe Tropical Storm "Enteng." However, according to the interviewed fish vendors, high prices were still noted in the wholesale markets. As a result, vendors opted to limit the volume of fish they purchased due to higher capital requirements. Specifically, sufficient supply of local fresh calamangas labaki was noted, with a recorded prevailing retail price of Php240.00/kg and Php260.00/kg, sourced from various areas including Malabon Fish Port, Navotas, Lucena, Palawan, Farmers, and Romblon.

Capital requirements: specificity, sufficient supply of local fresh galunggong lakas was noted, with a recorded prevailing retail price of P112,70.00/kg and P120,00.00/kg, sourced from various areas including Malabon Fish Port, Navotas, Lucena, Balintawak, Farmers, and Komitrol. 2. The display of large-sized (8-10 pieces/kg) imported frozen galunggong lakasi (Decapterus macrossoma) was recorded in most of the monitored retail markets this week, sourced from Malabon and Navotas Fish Port. This might be attributed to the higher wholesale price of the local variant, forcing vendors to purchase the imported commodity due to its affordable price, allowing them to sell out more easily. 3. Consequently, minimal but sufficient display of alumahan (Rastrelliger kangurta) was also observed at the monitored markets today. On the other hand, large-sized supplies remain the majority, sourced from Lucena, the Farmers Market (wholesale), Malabon, and Navotas Fish Port. 4.
